What is the seminar about? Who should attend?

Most shareholders’ disputes arise in the context of small companies where the members are involved in bitter personal squabbles. Given the predominance of small, family-owned businesses in Ireland, the chances are that you will be asked for advice in such matters in the course of your practice. Similarly, tough economic times have meant creditors are more eager than ever to ensure they get paid. They will want your opinion on how to set about achieving this!

What happens when the company’s directors abuse their powers to the detriment of shareholders? Or where the company simply refuses to pay a debt owed to a creditor? What remedies are available to them? That is the focus of this seminar. The aim is to provide practitioners with an understanding of all the options available to their clients in matters involving corporate disputes. Some of these options are well known; most of them are not. We discuss each available remedy and the practicalities of enforcing them in the courts.

- Solicitors and barristers advising minority shareholders in small and large companies.
- Solicitors, barristers, insolvency practitioners and accountants advising creditors on getting paid.
- Solicitors and other practitioners advising company directors on their rights and duties.
- Company directors who are serious about compliance with their duties and responsibilities.
- Shareholders and creditors.
- Anyone with an interest in corporate law!
